PROENERGY ATTENDS COAL POWER SHOW

ProEnergy Services recently participated in Coal-Gen 2008, an international trade show focused on coal-fueled power generation.

Coal-Gen, produced by PennWell Publishing Corp., was held Aug. 13-15 at the Kentucky International Convention Center in downtown Louisville. The show drew more than 4,000 attendees and 350 exhibitors.

“Coal continues to be the nation’s primary source of electrical power generation, and this show was a great opportunity for us to make some very important industry contacts,” said company Vice President John Stevens, who attended the show. “We also were able to learn more about changing regulations regarding coal emissions. That’s a very hot topic right now.”

Coal-Gen is the industry's most dynamic event covering the latest topics affecting design, development, upgrading, operation and maintenance of coal-fueled power plants.

ProEnergy provides cost-effective, safe and reliable service to industrial customers throughout the global energy industry. The company has U.S. offices in Sedalia, Mo.; Atlanta; Houston; and Tulsa; and overseas locations in Argentina, Mexico, Venezuela, Pakistan, Panama and Ghana.
